Note: With cooler temperatures make sure you check your tire pressure before you ride. Ensure your tires are cold or first thing in the morning before you ride. Inflation tends to drop with cooler temperatures. It's important to check your tire inflation at least every two weeks. If you already went out for a ride, wait at least three hours for the tires to cool down before you check them. Keyword: COLD PSI. As temperatures rise, tire pressure will increase.

Fun Facts: For every 10 degrees of temperature drop, tires will drop 1-2 lbs of pressure. Just the opposite during Hot weather.

Over-Inflating your tires in the Winter can cause loss in traction, handling, bumpier ride, premature tire wear and reduced safety.
